2016 commemorative project for the centenary of the Battle of the Somme, with a particular focus on the North East

Primarily funded by:
14-18 NOW WW1 Centenary Art Commissions across the UK and Sunderland Cultural Partnership

PROJECT AIMS

- to uncover untold stories of WW1 with a focus on Sunderland and the North East of England
- to experiment with mixing archive with contemporary footage shot especially for the film
- to create a narrative that weaves oral history testimonies, diary entries and memoirs from those that lived through WW1 with newspaper stories published in 1914-18 editions of the Sunderland Daily Echo and Shipping Gazette
- to collaborate with musicians from the North East to create an original soundtrack to be performed live at the premiere

ASUNDER
 a film by Esther Johnson

Asunder tells the story of what happened to an English town during the First World War, with almost all of its men fighting abroad and its women and children left behind. The North East was in the front line, thanks to its shipyards and munitions factories.

Using archive and contemporary footage and audio, Asunder collages the stories of people from Tyne-side and Wear-side to uncover what life was like on the home front, with bombs falling on Britain for the first time, conscientious objectors sentenced to death, and women working as doctors, train conductors, and footballers. The narrative moves from an Edwardian golden era, in which sport grew in popularity and aircraft and cars pointed to a bright new future, to a war that horrifically reversed this progress. In the Battle of the Somme, British, French and German armies fought one of the most traumatic battles in military history. Over the course of just four months, more than one million soldiers were captured, wounded or killed in a confrontation of unimaginable horror.

MUSIC

- Orchestral score inspired by early 1900s experiments in music
- Use of woodwind and celeste popular in late 1800s/early 1900s. Decision not to use brass and traditional notions instrumentation for war.
- Researched traditional folk songs – found The Rigs of Sunderland Fair about an ideal day at the fair, sung A cappella in the film
- Researched Music Hall and early recorded music technologies such as wax cylinders
- Score – Orchestral and string quartet version

"One of the things which intrigued me especially about this project was our love of the orchestral music from that period. Stravinsky's The Rite of Spring premiered in 1913, Schoenberg's Pierrot Lunaire in 1912. Bela Bartok and Maurice Ravel were composing, as was Claude Debussy, so it was a time of huge change in harmony and composition and we've dipped into that period for inspiration a lot."

– Peter Brewis from Field Music

A NEW SONG.

THE RIGS OF SUNDERLAND FAIR.

COME all ye honest folk, come listen a while,
A Sunderland fair, it's a sight to see,
And when the night comes, listen to the choir,
The Sunderland fair, it's a sight to see.

From Wapping and Cannon, through the town,
And from the Rigs of Sunderland fair,
We'll sing you a song, it's a sight to see,
The Sunderland fair, it's a sight to see.

From Wapping and Cannon, through the town,
And from the Rigs of Sunderland fair,
We'll sing you a song, it's a sight to see,
The Sunderland fair, it's a sight to see.

From Wapping and Cannon, through the town,
And from the Rigs of Sunderland fair,
We'll sing you a song, it's a sight to see,
The Sunderland fair, it's a sight to see.

From Wapping and Cannon, through the town,
And from the Rigs of Sunderland fair,
We'll sing you a song, it's a sight to see,
The Sunderland fair, it's a sight to see.

From Wapping and Cannon, through the town,
And from the Rigs of Sunderland fair,
We'll sing you a song, it's a sight to see,
The Sunderland fair, it's a sight to see.

PREMIERE AUDIENCE FEEDBACK

"In the plethora of events marking the centenary of the First World War and especially the Somme, Asunder really stood out for me: its highly imaginative concept, brilliant storytelling, geographical and cultural specificity, above all its power to move and connect with the reality of events 100 years ago.

A fantastic piece of work." – Michael Chaplin, Writer

"The film was meticulously researched and put together to evoke so many emotions, what a tribute... I think the resounding set of applause at the end of the show said it all!" – Vicky Willis, Sir James Knott Trust

"Asunder was phenomenal!"

– Brenda Graham, Sunderland Heritage Forum

"I thought it was amazing and loved every minute. The stories were so lovely and left you wanting to find out more – faultless."

– Louise Clamp, Sunderland Vibrancy Group

"The show was incredibly moving and powerful, I was very emotional at points."

– Lynne Patience, Sunderland resident
