

Media, Memory and Sporting Mega-Events

BLACK, Jack <<http://orcid.org/0000-0002-1595-5083>>

Available from Sheffield Hallam University Research Archive (SHURA) at:

<http://shura.shu.ac.uk/21293/>

---

This document is the author deposited version. You are advised to consult the publisher's version if you wish to cite from it.

Published version

BLACK, Jack (2018). Media, Memory and Sporting Mega-Events. In: Changing the rules of the game? An interdisciplinary symposium examining the relationship between sport and media, Loughborough University, 16 -17 May 2018. (Unpublished)

---

Copyright and re-use policy

See <http://shura.shu.ac.uk/information.html>

‘Media, Memory and Sporting Mega-Events’

Dr. Jack Black
Sheffield Hallam University

Presented at:

‘Changing the rules of the game? An interdisciplinary symposium examining the relationship between sport and media’, Centre for Communication and Culture, Department of Social Sciences, Loughborough University, Loughborough, UK, May 2018

Abstract

Whether examining interpretations of the ‘past’ in Hollywood blockbusters or when critiquing the ways in which mediated representations can undermine ‘historical truth’, it is apparent that ‘the media’ occupies a unique position in how explanations of the past are (re)presented, interpreted and disseminated. At the heart of this dissemination is how the ‘past’ is routinely used and re-used in making sense of the ‘present’. One notable example of this is in media coverage of national and international sporting mega-/media events. Here, the interrelationship between sport and the media offers a unique opportunity to examine how ‘mediated memories’ form a constitutive feature in the reporting of sport.

Accordingly, by way of exploring the intersections between media, memory and sport, this paper will examine recent debates on the mediatization of memory. Drawing upon examples from the 2012 London Olympic Games and the 2014 Glasgow Commonwealth Games, it will examine how the media and, in particular, national newspapers provided a pivotal role in employing collective memories of the past in order to make sense of contemporary social and political debates. This included accounts of the former British Empire, its relation to the contemporary Commonwealth of Nations and its impact on the UK and its constitutive ‘home nations’.

More importantly, attempts will be made to build a theoretical interpretation that examines the ways in which mediated memories center on a past-present alignment which, in this instance, served to influence the ways in which ‘history’ was mediated.

Keywords

Jacques Lacan, media, collective memory, London 2012, Glasgow 2014, British Empire, retroactive causality

References

- Anderson B (2006) Imagined communities: Reflections on the origin and spread of nationalism. London: Verso.
- Bell DSA (2003) Mythscapes: memory, mythology, and national identity. British Journal of Sociology 54(1): 63-81.
- Carpentier N and Trioen M (2010) The particularity of objectivity: A post- structuralist and psychoanalytical reading of the gap between objectivity-as-a-value and objectivity-as-a-practice in the 2003 Iraqi war coverage. Journalism 11(3): 311-328.
- Conboy M. (2007) A Tale of Two Battles. Media History 13(2-3): 257-271.
- De Groot J (2011) 'Perpetually dividing and suturing the past and present': Mad Men and the illusions of history. Rethinking History 15(2): 269-285.
- Dunning E and Hughes J (2013) Norbert Elias and modern sociology knowledge, interdependence, power, process. London: Bloomsbury Academic.
- Edy JA (2006) Troubled Pasts: News and the Collective Memory of Social Unrest. Philadelphia: Temple University Press.
- Engelken-Jorge M (2010) The anti-immigrant discourse in Tenerife: Assessing the Lacanian theory of ideology. Journal of Political Ideologies 15(1): 69-88.
- Fasolt C (2004) The Limits of History. Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press.
- Hurley JS (1998) Real Virtuality: Slavoj Žižek and 'Post-Ideological Ideology'. Postmodern Culture: Journal of Interdisciplinary Thought on Contemporary Cultures 9(1).
- Hutchinson J (2009) Warfare and the Sacralisation of Nations: The Meanings, Rituals and Politics of National Remembrance. Millennium - Journal of International Studies 38(2): 401-417.
- Morris-Suzuki T (2005) The Past Within Us: Media, Memory and History. London; New York: Verso.
- Myers T (2003) Slavoj Žižek. London: Routledge.
- Palmer C (2003) Touring Churchill's England: Rituals of Kinship and Belonging. Annals of Tourism Research 30(2): 426-445.
- Sand S (2017) Twilight of History. London; New York: Verso.

Schudson M (1992) Watergate in American memory: How we remember, forget, and reconstruct the past. New York: Basic Books.

Van der Vlies T (2016) Multidirectional War Narratives in History Textbooks. Paedagogica Historica: International Journal of the History of Education 52(3): 300-314.

Wright P (2009) On living in an old country: The national past in contemporary Britain. New York; Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Žižek S (2006) How to Read Lacan. London: Granta Books.

Zizek S (2012) Less Than Nothing: Hegel and the Shadow of Dialectical Materialism. London; New York: Verso.